Augustine met Brower's sister and the two were about town together. She is but seventeen years old and it is said rather childish in disposition. The brother of the girl saw Augustine in company with his sister, and this in itself was not favorable. Augustine is about thirty years of age and old enough to know right from wrong, (if he cares.) During the night he and his companion secured the rig he drove to town in the afternoon and went out to the Brower ranch, followed by the brother, who was wild with rage over the impudence morning when Brower reached the ranch and he found the two, so he says, in his room. On being ordered to leave, Augustine and the girl went to the barn, hitched up the horse and started for town. Edith put on the heavy duck coat of Augustine and this was the cause of her being shot by her brother instead of her companion. Just as the two were ready to leave the premises, Brower aimed at the duck coat with a shot gun loaded with No. 4 with a groan, fell to the ground. Augustine hurriedly picked her up and of horse stealing. placing her bleeding form in the buggy, started for town. It is also said that Brower took a shot at Augustine but missed his aim, Then Augustine, with his suffering companion by his side, hurried to Alliance to the home of her parents, where surgeons removed a number of shot from the wound in her
